 Rodney E. Fuller Primary Examiner Art Unit: 2851

The applicant makes the argument that in the Final Rejection, dated March 16, 2006, (regarding passages of the prior art cited by the examiner) that the examiner stated "that these passages would suggest to one skilled in the art that the focus of the image on the rear projection screen is variable, which would allow for controlling a depth of field of the filmed scene. This very statement is evidence that the limitation from claim 8 is neither expressly or inherently described in the single piece of prior art that is Douglas." The examiner notes that the comments of the examiner in the Final Rejection stated: "The examiner maintains that the noted disclosure teaches and would suggest to one skilled in the art that the focus of the image on the rear projection screen is variable, which would allow for controlling a depth of the filmed scene." (Emphasis added by examiner) Further, the applicant notes that the "the original filing date of the Douglas reference is 1951" and makes the argument "that the Examiner is exhibiting tremendous hindsight in determining what was inherent in the description at the time of filing." In response to applicant's argument that the examiner's conclusion is based on improper hindsight reasoning, it must be recognized that any judgment that takes into account only knowledge which was within the level of ordinary skill at the time the claimed invention was made, and does not include knowledge gleaned only from the applicant's disclosure, is proper.
